Adapting UDL

In the early 1960s, visionary architect Selwyn Goldsmith designed the initial curb cut or dropped curb to encourage people with limited mobility to have access to city sidewalks. It was part of a larger movement (led by disability advocates) toward universal access in the built environment by changing policies, systems, and to promote full inclusion. In the last few

UDL Guidelines

The Universal Design for Learning (UDL) framework is a set of principles and guidelines that help educators create learning experiences that are accessible to all learners.

The goal of UDL is to ensure that all learners have the opportunity to learn and succeed.
